Data General Introduces Korean CEO

The Korean version of CEO attracted a lot of attention at the recent Korean Software Exhibition.

Data General and its Korean distributor, Zungwon Systems (ZWS), recently introduced a Korean version of Comprehensive Electronic Office (CEO) automation software at the Korean Software Exhibition held in Seoul.

CEO is the first office automation product introduced in Korea which supports Hangul and Chinese capabilities; both are necessary for the Korean business environment. The Korean language consists of two written forms. The first, Hangul, is a phonetic language with about 50 phonetic alphabets which form Hangul characters. The second, Chinese, consists of approximately 4,000 characters and are used frequently to clarify the meaning. Most Hangul phrases can be translated into Chinese phrases. A Korean person's name and address are usually written in Chinese characters.

Since the introduction of the English version of CEO in 1981, CEO is now available in many languages including Italian, French, Portuguese, Spanish, German and Japanese. There are more than 280,000 users worldwide and more than 8000 licenses have been issued.

"We were very pleased to introduce Korean CEO at the Korean Software Exhibition Centre," says S.S. Lee, director of Research and Development for ZWS. "This localized product is the first integrated office automation system to be introduced in Korea and has many features which meet the requirements of the business environment in the fast growing economy of this country."

Paul Jones, general manager at Data General-Korea, says, "We already have more than 170 Data General users in a broad range of industries in Korea, including 36 universities, the Korean Electric Corporation, the Investment and Finance Corporation, government ministries, banks, hospitals and manufacturing plants. We are very excited about the potentials and opportunities for both existing and new customers that Korean CEO will bring to Data General and our distributor, Zungwon Systems.”

Sarkissian Addresses Japanese

In an event sponsored by Data General and Nippon Telegraph and Telephone (NTT), Vahe Sarkissian, vice president of the Telecommunications Products Division, recently discussed information exchange and networking with Japanese computer users. Vahe talked about Data General's relationship with NTT and Data General's efforts in producing a new generation of high-speed, integrated communications systems for NTT. The Japanese company expects to make the private networking product available to its customers this fall.

“NTT chose Data General as its partner to bring you networking solutions because NTT saw Data General to be a computer company with a strong commitment to information networks,” said Vahe. “Data General believes in the convergence of computing and telecommunications into the information business.

“NTT and Data General have teamed up to provide a comprehensive solution for Japanese-based, private, multinational networks to address tremendous diversity. Network solutions such as CEPT 1, ISDN-SD, ISDN-T1 and ISDN, are based on international standards and migration capabilities from older standards.

“With this capability, network integration becomes greatly simplified and enables users to plan for long range requirements and begin to implement solutions in an orderly manner.

“These comprehensive solutions will be available in various phases over a period of time. As these solutions become available, managing information will become easier and we will see smiles on the faces of information managers. We are very happy to be a part of this joint program with NTT and look forward to a prosperous relationship for a long time to come in bringing comprehensive solutions to information networking problems.”

Data General's Position On Drugs In The Workplace

Data General has a long established practice with regards to drug use by employees. The company will make every effort to help any employee who has a problem with alcohol or drugs. At the same time, however, the company will not tolerate drug use in the workplace.

Data General is committed to maintaining a drug-free workplace. Additionally, as a federal contractor, the company is required to outline its policies to employees. These requirements are contained in the Drug Free Workplace Act of 1988.

Drugs In The Workplace

Data General rules prohibit the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensing, possession or use of drugs, including alcohol, in the workplace. Violation of the rules is considered a serious offense that cannot be tolerated and would result in discipline up to and including termination of employment.

The Drug-Free Workplace Act requires that all employees abide by company rules regarding drugs as a condition of continued employment on a government contract. If convicted of a drug violation occurring at work, the employee working on a government contract must notify the company within five days. If remaining with the company following conviction, the employee must satisfactorily participate in an approved drug abuse assistance or rehabilitation program.

Assistance

Data General's Health Services department provides confidential assistance to employees seeking help with an alcohol or drug-related problem. Additionally, Data General's medical benefit plans and most of the HMOs offered to employees provide financial assistance for treatment of such problems.

Drug Testing

Data General does not test employees for the presence of drugs and, under the current law, does not foresee the implementation of such a practice. However, Department of Defense rules could result in a requirement for testing in very limited situations in which an employee was directly involved in government contract work having access to classified information. In such cases, employees would be expected to agree to testing as a condition of employment.

Data General Aids Families With Trip To "Oz"

Brad Adams, Data General Sales representative for the County of Riverside, presents Mary Ann Stalder, executive director for the Riverside County Coalition for Alternatives to Domestic Violence, with tickets to the theatrical performance of "The Wizard of Oz."

Five families from the Riverside County area in California recently attended the theatrical showing of "The Wizard of Oz" at the Forum in Inglewood, California, courtesy of Data General's Southern California Region and as guests of Bruce Wiens, Regional Director. A donation by Data General was made to the Riverside County Coalition for Alternatives to Domestic Violence (RCCADV), making it possible for the families to attend the event.

"The donation of the tickets by Data General created a great deal of excitement within the organization," according to Mary Ann Stalder, executive director for the RCCADV. "At the support group meeting following the event, the topic of conversation was 'The Wizard of Oz' and how absolutely elated the families were who attended. This is something these families would never have been able to do if it wasn't for this donation."

The RCCADV is a county-wide, non-profit agency serving victims of domestic violence and their families.

Data General is a major computer supplier to the County of Riverside with systems installed in the Elections Office, Superior and Municipal Courts, the County Clerk and Recorder office, and the Roads, Land Information Management and Waste Management Departments.

Data General Employees Making A

Contributor of the Quarter.

Employee of the Quarter.

Director's awards.

Despite the different names for the awards, divisions within Data General recognize employees who have made outstanding contributions to business-related projects. On these pages are some of the employees who have been feted by their organizations of late. Starting with this issue of Mini News, award winners will be featured once per quarter. If an employee in your organization recently received a Director's award, "employee or contributor of the quarter," or any other honor for doing a good job, let Public Affairs know by calling Michelle Marden at extension 228-4705 in Westboro.

Travel Reservationist Of The Quarter

Data General's travel reservationists handle about 25,000 travel reservation requests per quarter from employees making business travel arrangements. Nancy Joslyn recently was awarded with an employee of the quarter award for being one of the top performers in the Corporate Travel department. In the photo to the left, Nancy (left), is congratulated by Maureen Forrett, supervisor of Reservations.

Treasury Person Of The Quarter

A key to any successful employee is being organized. That's what helped Susan Johnson recently when she assumed the responsibilities for an employee on a leave of absence. Despite the additional duties, Susan (left), a corporate stock analyst in the Shareholder Services department, was able to complete two major projects as well as a task required by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Treasurer Ellen Richstone presented Susan with the award.

Sullivan Receives Director's Award

Al Scura (left), director of the Applications Systems Development group, awards Brian Sullivan, a software engineer, with a Director's award for his work on the development of CEOwrite. A lot of hard work by many employees has gone into the CEOwrite product, but Brian's contributions and leadership have been particularly important to the progress of the CEOwrite program.

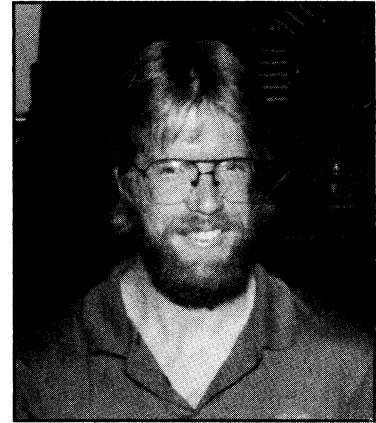

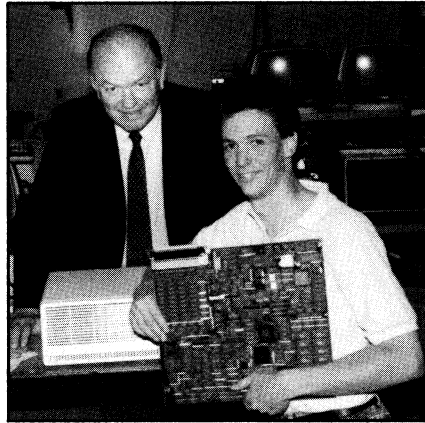

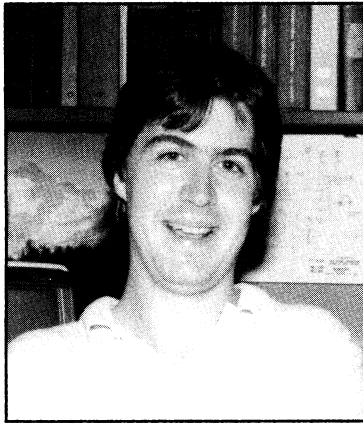

Difference

Human Resources Recognizes Reynolds

Steve Reynolds, a Relocation specialist, works in Travel and Expense, a department within the Finance organization. His assistance on a project with Human Resources, however, resulted in that division's presentation of a Director's award to him. Talk about teamwork. Human Resources was faced with a mounting issue involving employee relocations. Steve stepped in and spearheaded the campaign to resolve the issues to everyone's satisfaction. In the photo to the left (from left to right) are: Mike Evans, vice president and chief financial officer, Bob Vitale, director of Human Resources, Steve, and Don Bateman, vice president of Human Resources.

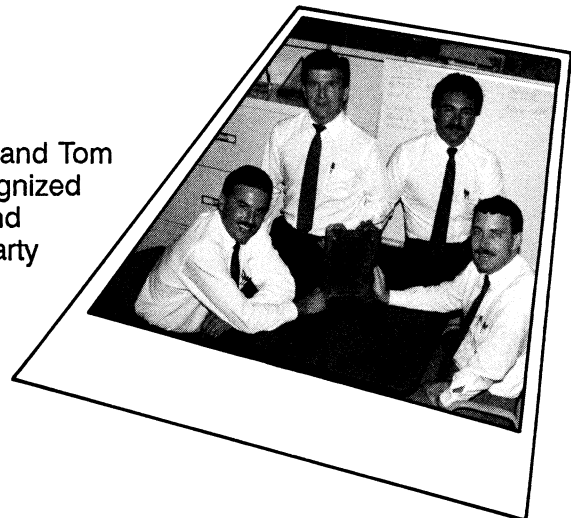

Director's Award Recipients

Dave Moore (left), Randy Beatty (center) and Kyle Harris (right) have something in common. Each was presented with a Director's award from Art Holmes (center photograph, right), director of Very Large Scale Integration. Dave coordinated and completed new system simulations for a soon to be released product. He was also involved with the design and simulation of at least three of the four gate arrays and a major portion of the system board. Randy served as a key member of the ECLIPSE MV/1000 DC team. He consistently devoted extra time and effort to meeting aggressive schedules and assisted other teams in meeting their goals. Kyle was recognized for his outstanding work on a new advanced microprocessor. In addition to the test vector generation, he was heavily involved in the overall test strategy.

And Some Major Opportunities

The team of Tom Tibbetts, Steve Lento, Robert Kenny and Tom Welton has a lot to be proud of. They have been recognized for generating new Field Engineering sales revenue and winning back business which had been lost to third-party maintenance companies. The team's combined work experience of 37 years at Data General was a key to their success. In the photograph to the right (from left to right) are: Bob, Tom Welton, Steve and Tom Tibbetts.

The new Wild River Falls is the ultimate family water attraction with six different water rides. Fly down three stories in just three seconds on the Riptide slide.
